What if, during your stay in Indonesia, you had the chance to meet a French-speaking expat, who could tell you all about his own experience of the country?

The expat, with whom you'll be spending a unique moment, is a lover of travel and multicultural encounters. He or she is a local 'companion' (not a conventional guide). He may be the friend you'd dream of having in the four corners of the world. He's someone who knows the place like the back of his hand and who agrees, according to his whims and tastes, to offer you - for half a day, a whole day or even an evening - an informal stroll, in other words a real immersion in the culture and customs of the country where he lives. You'll benefit from his advice and his address book, while learning about local life and customs. It's an instructive, relaxed, privileged and convivial way of sharing.

Following in the expatriate's footsteps, you'll discover a typical, authentic Indonesian town (or region), its street food, food markets, small boutiques and confidential craft workshops, as well as meeting artists, village chiefs and even traditional families. You'll mingle with the crowds or, on the contrary, escape them, but, above all, you'll talk about the daily life of the locals. In short, a great encounter, with no fuss, where nothing is really planned in advance and where the walk is improvised according to your tastes and those of the expat.

Day 1. Dare to eat street food!

Yogyakarta 📍

- The local expatriate will meet you at your hotel at around 5pm and, for around 4 hours, will offer you the chance to try the best street food in the city. It's an opportunity for an informal stroll, a real immersion in the culture and customs of the country where he lives. You'll benefit from his advice and his address book, while learning about local life and customs. It's an instructive, relaxed, privileged and convivial way of sharing.
